

A new Spanish, European, and global development model that could be tested in Torreblanca, Castellón – Notice to political parties

The adventures of the young and dynamic fictional mayor of Torreblanca continue in a new volume, always accompanied by the young and talented Torreblanca native, Laura BODIS. A scene set on the terrace of a café-restaurant in a campsite in Torrenostra!

Here is an analysis of the book “THE MUNICIPALITIES COUNTER-ATTACK – Planetary cooperative mechanism” by Paul Elvere DELSART:

Content Analysis

The book presents a work of speculative social fiction that functions at the same time as a political, ecological, and civilizational manifesto. Through a dialogued narrative style, mainly between Carmen ORTIZ, young and dynamic mayor of Torreblanca (Castellón), and the young Laura BODIS, the ideas of the character Henry HARPER, architect of a new development model called EL4DEV, are gradually revealed.

The core of the proposal is the subprogram “THE MUNICIPALITIES COUNTER-ATTACK”, whose purpose is to empower small rural localities, marginalized by globalization and centralized state models. It proposes a paradigm shift based on three pillars:

1. Ecological and social infrastructures
 - The Vegetal Calderas: living structures that generate microclimates, biodiversity, and tourist appeal.
 - LE PAPILLON SOURCE agroclimatic parks and complexes: hubs of agricultural, tourist, and cultural innovation, conceived as experimental cities and food banks.
2. Cooperative financing mechanisms
 - National social Economic Interest Groups (EIGs): structures that bring municipalities together to finance and manage joint projects.
 - The BIG SMART DATA EL4DEV: a global digital platform to coordinate projects, share knowledge, and ensure transparency through blockchain.
 - The GREEN COIN EL4DEV: a cooperative currency backed by certified agricultural land, designed to stimulate local and international exchanges outside of speculative currencies.
3. Cultural and political dimension
 - The TICI and TACI: intellectual and artistic initiatives enabling villages to cooperate beyond the economic sphere.
 - The reconstruction of popular sovereignty from the ground up, breaking away from state and European verticality, and aiming at a planetary Confederation of municipalities (the EL4DEV Confederation or Green Empire of the East and the West).

The narrative places Torreblanca as a prototype and living laboratory for this transformation. The fiction highlights the political and personal tensions involved in pursuing such a project: risk of institutional marginalization, conflicts with parties, or even international rejection. However, it also opens the possibility for a small municipality to become the epicenter of a civilizational renaissance.

Critical Assessment

- Conceptual innovation: the book combines elements of social engineering, regenerative ecology, alternative economics, and participatory governance. It is not merely a literary utopia but a theoretical model with practical applications.

- Narrative dimension: by using novel-like dialogues, the author brings complex ideas closer to the general reader, although at times the discourse may feel more essay-like than narrative.
- Political perspective: it proposes a peaceful revolution starting from the local level, with the potential to surpass state and supranational models. This gives it a subversive tone against traditional power structures.
- Limitations: the magnitude of the vision collides with legal, economic, and cultural obstacles. The author acknowledges these risks but relies on the modularity and gradual implementation of the model.

Conclusion

“THE MUNICIPALITIES COUNTER-ATTACK” is a hybrid text between visionary essay and speculative fiction. Its main contribution is to offer a new grammar of territorial power, in which rural villages, seemingly marginal, become the key actors of a civilizational transition.

It is an invitation to rethink the relationship between municipality, sovereignty, ecology, and culture in a global framework, proposing that the resilience of the future will not be built from capitals, but from interconnected local communities.

THE MUNICIPALITIES COUNTER-ATTACK – Planetary cooperative mechanism

Subtitle: Territorial engineering for civilizational change

In Torreblanca, Castellón, a modest coastal town in Spain, a young, courageous mayor and a brilliant 22-year-old citizen explore the ambitious project of Henry HARPER: to unite forgotten territories, breathe new life into the countryside, and build, step by step, a new civilization.

Monumental ecological experimental parks, a cooperative land-backed currency, digital platforms for collective intelligence, transnational artistic and intellectual initiatives... THE MUNICIPALITIES COUNTER-ATTACK is not just fiction: it is a systemic vision in which rurality once again becomes the beating heart of a new world.

Page after page, a novel mechanism of financing, management, and governance unfolds; one that turns small communes into the true engines of global transformation. The framework appears as a territorial resilience kit, a genuine post-collapse solution capable of rebuilding nations, repopulating neglected areas, rejuvenating rural populations, and even offering a citizen-driven way out of a failing European Union. Beyond that, it aspires to prevent any form of invasion or colonization by restoring sovereignty and vitality to territories both North and South.

This short work of social anticipation, blending human intrigue with concrete proposals, takes us on a dizzying journey: from the terrace of a campsite café-restaurant in Torrenostre to the emergence of a planetary Confederation of free and united territories.

Utopia or civilizational pragmatic blueprint for survival?

Through the doubts of Carmen ORTIZ and the convictions of Laura BODIS, the reader discovers an unprecedented cooperative mechanism that could transform our nations... and perhaps save our future.
