

Generation Z - El Salvador-Torreblanca global pact - Book Summary

Subtitle: The 300 of Elon MUSK, Nayib BUKELE and Elena BERBERANA

Generation Z - When an international conference transforms Torreblanca, Castellón and El Salvador into laboratories of a new civilization and anchoring points of a new geopolitics

A wind of transformation is blowing over the small Mediterranean municipality of Torreblanca and the Central American capital San Salvador. This unprecedented movement, initiated by the multidisciplinary participatory engineering program EL4DEV, brought together 300 young people from Generation Z who came from dozens of countries in the Spanish speaking world and its cultural peripheries for what presents itself as a global Renaissance.

The book recounts with intensity this collective experience that blends utopia, civic engagement, raw emotion and geopolitical visions. At the heart of this experience are three public figures, Elon MUSK, Nayib BUKELE and Elena BERBERANA, whose interventions provoke an emotional and political shift among the participants. We witness a conference that transforms into a planetary movement.

The book opens in Torreblanca, Spain, where Carmen ORTIZ, the 30 year old mayor of the municipality, and Laura BODIS, a 22 year old Torreblanca resident, prepare an unprecedented conference. Their objective is to unite Torreblanca and El Salvador in order to turn them into two pilot territories, living laboratories capable of testing new social, ecological and collaborative forms.

Three days later, in San Salvador, the 300 young guests discover an immersive staging with holograms, interactive installations, historical friezes of the EL4DEV program, prototypes of future cities and booths presenting ecological innovations. The magical and epic atmosphere evokes the beginning of an epic rather than that of a simple congress.

The Spanish journalist Elena BERBERANA, chosen to host the event, sets the tone from the opening: "Today, we did not come to listen to a conference. We came to witness the birth of a new world." Her role quickly goes beyond that of a presenter; she becomes a guiding voice, a sensitive and lucid witness to the emotional transformation of the youth.

At the heart of the conference a decisive moment occurs. First comes the intervention of Henry HARPER, a visionary intellectual behind the EL4DEV program, who greets Generation Z as the first civilizational architects of their time. Then the screens turn off and the room plunges into darkness. Two logos appear, SpaceX, Tesla, and the turquoise emblem of the Republic of El Salvador.

Elon MUSK appears live, sober and almost vulnerable. He confides that he has been following everything since the morning. He tells the young people: "You are the brightest, most collaborative generation I have seen. What you are creating here is more important than Mars. You are creating a civilization, and I want to be part of it."

His announcement triggers an explosion of screams and tears. But he goes further: "I want us to start solving humanity's problems together, here in El Salvador, then in Torreblanca. From this moment on."

The commitment is unexpected and places the conference within an international and technological dimension.

Barely has Elon MUSK's screen turned off when a second one lights up. The Salvadoran president Nayib BUKELE appears, not behind a massive desk, but sitting outdoors facing the mountains. His presence is simple, almost fraternal.

His speech is a blend of political candor and personal emotion. “Many adults believe that what you are doing is impossible. I deeply believe in it. You are the generation that can reinvent what ours failed to repair.”

He addresses the 300 young people as if they were already his partners. “You are the co architects of the future of El Salvador. And if you wish, of the future of the world.”

Once again, the room is overwhelmed. The young people, Salvadorans and foreigners, scream, cry and sing. Nayib BUKELE concludes: “What you created today, we will accomplish together. I am waiting for you here. At home. In El Salvador.”

After the emotional storm caused by Elon MUSK and Nayib BUKELE, Elena BERBERANA returns to the stage. But she is no longer the composed journalist, she appears shaken, with shining eyes, walking as if on sacred ground.

She speaks in a soft, grateful voice: “You arrived skeptical. You leave transformed. More united. Stronger. Greater.” She sanctifies the experience and announces what comes next: an entire day dedicated to the young people's questions, with no censorship, where experts, elected officials and members of EL4DEV will answer everything.

Elena BERBERANA becomes the ideal mediator between emotion, reason and the future of the movement. She provides human coherence to the visions of MUSK, BUKELE and HARPER.

The book, although belonging to the realm of social fiction, reads like a vivid report. Paul Elvere Valérien DELSART presents an experience that oscillates between political utopia, citizen participation and collective imagination.

The work shows young people eager to create and to reform, who, in a conference hall, cross an invisible boundary, the one that separates the world as it is from the world as they could build it.

This book is not only a narrative. It is a civilizational and diplomatic proposal: to unite two modest but visionary territories, Torreblanca and El Salvador, around a global participatory movement.

The appearance of Elon MUSK, Nayib BUKELE and the inspiring guidance of Elena BERBERANA give the project a rare emotional and political credibility.

The book explores a central question: What if the future of the world emerged not from great powers but from small communities willing to dream and build together?

Generation Z – El Salvador–Torreblanca global pact – Back cover

What if 300 young people from Generation Z could trigger a new global Renaissance?

Between Torreblanca, Castellón, a small Mediterranean municipality in Spain turned social laboratory, and El Salvador, a Central American nation undergoing profound transformation, an unprecedented pact is taking shape. Symbolically supported by visionary figures such as Elon MUSK, Nayib BUKELE, and Spanish journalist Elena BERBERANA, the EL4DEV program brings together for the first time in San Salvador young people from dozens of nations to imagine the world of tomorrow.

At the heart of this human and geopolitical adventure, two young women rise: Carmen ORTIZ, the bold mayor of Torreblanca, and Laura BODIS, the vibrant voice of a youth unwilling to wait. Alongside them, the enigmatic thinker Henry HARPER orchestrates a radical vision: transforming territories, re-enchanting communities and offering a new kind of diplomacy to the people themselves.

Between speculative fiction and visionary realism, this book explores a future in which ecology, technology, international cooperation, and collective intelligence intertwine to give birth to a new civilization.

A program-novel. A manifesto for the future. A literary journey in which Nayib BUKELE's El Salvador becomes one of the epicenters of global change... driven by an international youth hungry for creation.

This book is an invitation to launch a planetary, participatory undertaking: what if it were up to you, now, to redesign the world?
