

Consultant CV - Paul Elvere DELSART

Social engineer - Visionary entrepreneur - Designer of alternative governance systems

General profile

Paul Elvere DELSART is a multidisciplinary creator committed to the design and implementation of new models of society. Founder of the EL4DEV program, he positions himself at the intersection of engineering, sociology, ecology, political philosophy and citizen diplomacy. His approach is distinguished by a desire to reconcile distributed governance, technological innovation and collective participation, in response to the perceived limits of current institutional systems.

Key skills

Social and systemic engineering: Design of distributed governance models, collaborative systems, territorial and transnational cooperation structures.

Societal and environmental innovation: Development of eco-social projects such as “self-regulated, greened and citizen-driven multifunctional cities and complexes” or participatory territorial structures.

Complex and transdisciplinary thinking: Fusion of concepts from engineering, geopolitics, ethics, education, culture and urban planning.

Communication and dissemination of ideas: Writing essays, books, manifestos and articles to promote an alternative vision of the world.

Alternative project leadership: Creation and management of the EL4DEV program, an independent initiative aimed at driving civilizational change.

Main achievements

Creator of the EL4DEV program: Experimental platform for participatory governance and transdisciplinary social engineering.

Promotion of a model of societal diplomacy: Non-state diplomacy based on citizen cooperation, culture and shared ethics.

Author of engaged publications: Books, articles and content proposing alternatives to dominant economic, political and social models.

Development of post-collapse organizational structures: Concrete proposals for resilient systems in the event of a global systemic crisis.

Positioning

Paul Elvere DELSART is an actor outside traditional institutions, yet carries a structured, coherent and deliberately disruptive vision. His work is part of a dynamic of societal transition, with a “post-technocratic” orientation; he uses the tools of technology and systemic analysis without adhering to an elitist or centralized logic.

Intention

The goal is not to build everything myself, but to design a coherent global system, then show people how to apply it. It is an approach of a vision carrier or societal model designer, far more than that of an isolated physical builder.

Complete system

Unlike many project leaders who create a single solution, for example an app, a school, a farm, I seek to reinvent a functional post-collapse civilization, with:

- a new model of distributed participatory governance, outside nation-states,
- tool-cities or experimental territories,
- an alternative ecological currency,
- an educational model based on cooperation, experimentation, storytelling, social engineering, play,
- a non-capitalist but productive economic system,
- forms of interterritorial “civil” diplomacy.

Show how to do it, not lead

I position myself as a kind of living manual:

- I write action plans, processes, reproducible models and educational documents,
  - I describe each stage of implementation, structuring, principles of an autonomous territory, creation of social value...,
  - I aim to equip local communities so they become autonomous and drivers of change.
- It is a role of catalyst, not leader; I initiate, document, structure. Then local actors take over.

What I produce

- a set of books, websites, strategic texts,
- social fictions to stimulate the collective imagination,
- transferable organizational models.

I propose a “free” structure, usable by anyone who shares the vision.

What I expect from others

- That they read, understand, organize locally, and build infrastructures themselves,
- That they spread the idea,
- That pilot territories get started, communities, associations, citizens,

That experimentation happens from the ground up and then the model spreads.

Politics, the role of “Universal Mediator”

I position myself as an architect who provides the plans. The terrain, country, matters little as long as the building, the social model, is constructed. This is what I call Civilizational Geostrategy.

It is a form of rootless politics; it transcends borders to address directly what I call “conscious humanity”.

In summary:

I am not here to finance, manage or control a system. I am here to design it, document it and transmit it. I want this system to outlive me, function without me, and be appropriated by independent communities.

The case of Torreblanca, Castellón in Spain

Torreblanca, in the Valencian autonomous community, has already begun to exist in the future. My universe has placed it on the map of the global imagination.

Torreblanca is now highly visible in a network of planetary ideas.

I have chosen Torreblanca as a utopian capital and experimental site.

The new image of Torreblanca is internationally distinctive; it is now a municipality linked to systemic thinking, utopian innovation and social experimentation.

This creates a potential for intellectual, artistic or experimental attraction; researchers, curious minds, activists, architects of imagination, societal entrepreneurs, digital nomads...

Torreblanca now benefits from a symbolic diplomatic springboard that it should use; associating with a “city of peace” or “social laboratory” project strengthens its stature even within Spanish and international political circles.

It benefits from a unique and expansive territorial narrative; it becomes “the city spoken about in the books of change”, not just a small seaside destination.

Torreblanca is intended to become an open-air project incubator and an intellectual and creative hub for the world’s younger generations.

I act on the global perception that the world has of Torreblanca.

I create a parallel brand for Torreblanca more attractive for technological investment and digital nomadism than simple beach tourism and Mediterranean sun.
