

The objective of Paul Elvere DELSART – Finding a major patron with a disruptive vision

Since 2011, I have carried a vision that some have described as “social fiction.” Yet I have never stopped considering it as a reality in the making. My movement, EL4DEV, is simply waiting for a decisive catalyst to cross that threshold: the encounter with a major patron who shares a disruptive vision like mine.

Because yes, with initial support that matches its ambitions, EL4DEV could move beyond the realm of ideas widely shared on the Internet and fully enter that of concrete action on a global scale.

Bringing the first LE PAPILLON SOURCE infrastructures to life

I aspire to see the emergence of the first multifunctional complexes labelled LE PAPILLON SOURCE, initially in Spain (Torreblanca, Castellón), in France, and in Cameroon (Ngompem), and then elsewhere in the world (Mediterranean basin, Russia, El Salvador, etc.). With strong initial financial backing, these structures would no longer be mere intellectual projections, but real, living, breathing, and interconnected places.

I envision eco-landscape and agro-climatic spaces where human beings regain their rightful place within the living world. Territories capable of moving toward local self-sufficiency by developing their own agricultural and energy resources. Small municipalities that no longer endure circumstances, but instead co-create their resilience.

These infrastructures would also serve as hubs for ethical tourism. Not places of consumption, but spaces for experimentation and awakening. Some would take the form of alter-globalist leisure parks, where people come not only to reconnect with themselves but also to learn, understand, reinvent their relationship with the world, and build transformative projects.

Laying the foundations for a new governance

With the necessary resources to initiate the process, I could convince two initial municipalities (within the same country or in different countries) to structure the EL4DEV Confederation as a true alternative to current systems. Not through sterile opposition, but through constructive proposal.

I am convinced that our models of governance must evolve. Too often inefficient, opaque, or disconnected, they call for a complete rethinking. I propose a form of social engineering based on transparency, cooperation, and collective responsibility.

Modern technologies, far from being threats, can become powerful allies. Blockchain and Big Data would offer the ability to measure social impact in real time, ensure decision traceability, and guarantee ethical resource management.

This is not a technological utopia. It is a moral imperative.

Deploying participatory social engineering on a global scale

Patronage would also make it possible to transform my ideas laboratory into a true international action center.

I aim to bring together talents from all horizons: thinkers, creators, engineers, artists, committed citizens, and especially younger generations (Generations Z and Alpha). Together, we could co-build solutions, share knowledge, and above all, elevate the level of collective awareness.

Because the change I advocate is, above all, cultural.

That is why I deeply believe in the power of media. Producing films, creating educational platforms, sharing inspiring narratives and gamifying society. These are essential levers to initiate a paradigm shift. Moving from a society centered on individualism to a civilization grounded in interdependence.

From the Green Empire of the East and the West to a tangible reality

Ultimately, meeting a patron aligned with my values would not be merely financial support. It would mark a historic turning point.

It would allow what I call the “Green Empire of the East and the West” to move beyond the literary and speculative realm and become a concrete framework for transforming civil society.

My ambition is clear: to contribute to the emergence of a postmodern golden age. A world where equity is no longer an ideal, but a norm. Where respect for life guides our decisions. Where humanity stops enduring its future and finally begins to co-create it.

I am not seeking to convince. I am seeking to unite.

And perhaps, it all begins here.
