

The Green Empire of the East and the West, also known as the EL4DEV Confederation - Paul Elvere DELSART

The Green Empire of the East and the West, also known as the EL4DEV Confederation, is an ideological and geopolitical concept developed by Paul Elvere DELSART within the framework of his multidisciplinary universe called EL4DEV.

It is neither a real state nor an internationally recognized organization.

It is rather:

- a civilizational vision,
- a symbolic metaproject,
- and a kind of global political, ecological, and social narrative.

In his writings, this idea often combines:

- ecology,
- territorial sovereignty,
- agriculture,
- education,
- cryptoeconomics,
- civilizational spirituality,
- cooperation between East and West and between North and South,
- and societal reconstruction.

The term “Empire” is used in a:

- civilizational,
- cultural,
- and geostrategic sense, rather than as a classical military empire.

The word “Green” refers to:

- ecology,
- sustainable development,
- the land,
- energy autonomy,
- self-sufficiency,
- and an economy that he presents as regenerative.

“East and West” symbolizes:

- a bridge between different civilizations,
- a cultural synthesis,
- and a desire to unify multiple geographical and intellectual spaces.

Overall, it presents itself as a blend of:

- political manifesto,
- ecological utopia,
- narrative strategy,
- ideological worldbuilding,
- and a transnational movement project.

Its style recalls certain grand narratives:

- techno-utopian,
- neo-civilizational,
- or metapolitical, where the goal is as much to create a highly mobilizing vision as it is to establish a concrete structure.

The aim here is to establish the EL4DEV Confederation, a fully decentralized supranational structure composed of a constellation of small autonomous, independent, greened, highly entrepreneurial, and interconnected municipalities adopting the Platonic model of the city-state.

The project is at once:

- extremely ambitious,
- highly hybrid,
- and difficult to classify within a single category.

It combines elements that normally remain separate:

- ecology,
- crypto,
- urban planning,
- agriculture,
- geopolitics,
- entrepreneurship,
- governance,
- civilizational spirituality,
- speculative fiction,
- viral communication,
- and territorial development.

It is precisely this hybrid dimension that gives it a distinctive character.

We are neither entirely dealing with:

- a conventional political project,
- nor a conventional startup,
- nor a religion,
- nor an identifiable work of art,
- nor a traditional think tank,
- nor a typical ecological or social movement.

It is a “narrative ecosystem,” a total work, and a meticulously orchestrated process aimed at creating:

- an optimistic vision of the future,
- a civilizational brand,
- and a network of interconnected initiatives.

Depending on individual sensitivity, this type of approach may:

- fascinate some people,
- appear visionary,
- or, on the contrary, seem vague or unrealistic to others.

Yet there is clearly a coherence in its style. Everything is designed to create a global structure in which:

- territories,
- the environment,
- the economy,
- culture,
- technology,
- politics,
- diplomacy,
- and collective identity mutually reinforce one another.

The project is conceived as a living network rather than as a single rigid organization. It gives the impression of a “mycelium.”

Even without fully adhering to it, people understand that there are:

- many layers,
- a strong imaginative intensity,
- and a willingness to think “at a civilizational scale.”

Most projects remain confined to one specific field. Here, everything is interconnected:

- currency,
- territories,
- historical narrative and mythology,
- ecology,
- engineering,
- influence,
- networks,
- collective identity,
- technological future.

It is a form of “real-world worldbuilding.” Paul Elvere DELSART is initiating the construction not merely of a company, an ideology, or a movement, but of an entire universe applicable to the real world.
